

NEELY CHRONICLE SERVES OPERATION WHATEVER

Local soldier seeks Sugar Moma

Neely County resident Caleb Hunt reads the Chronicle to keep tabs on what's happening back home while serving in Afghanistan. Senior Airman Hunt is part of what he fondly calls "Operation Whatever". As we understand it, "Operation Whatever" protects our strange brand of democracy which allows Pappy Hoover and Dubby to rule Neely County. Airman Hunt is a Support Journeyman who maintains a unit of A-10 "Tankbuster" aircraft.

Hunt's military obligation expires in December, 2005, unless Bush II is re-elected, in which case Hunt may be permanently stationed in the mid-east. Caleb is looking for a "Sugar Moma" to take care of him if and when he leaves the Air Force. Prospective "Sugar Mommas" can learn more about Airman Hunt by going to www.alaskantarheel.com/stories/homedaddy.htm for details. For "Sugar Mommas" who cant' wait until 2005, Hunt is scheduled to return to Alaska in October.

The Chronicle is proud to play a part in boosting the morale of our troops in the mid-east. Notice the Camel cigarettes in the chair cup holder and the barb wire behind where Airman Hunt is relaxing in his bathrobe while reading the Chronicle. Due to the classified nature of Airman Hunt's work, we are unable to tell our readers exactly where his A-10 unit is located. To prevent freedom from ringing across the desert sands, terrorists would love nothing more than to disrupt the flow of Chronicles into Afghanistan

Airman Hunt is stationed at Eielson Air Force Base in Fairbanks Alaska when he is not battling terrorists and giant Camel Spiders in Afghanistan. The small cat-sized spiders can be grilled over an open flame and basted with Kraft BBQ sauce for a tasty and nutritious supplement to military MREs.
